ABS. 1.84.55

THE CORPORATION OF THE

SCOTTISH PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

ESTABLISHED 1837.

THE TERMS of this Society secure, as compared with other Offices,—A greatly Larger Original Assurance for the same Premium, with the prospect to good lives, (for whom exclusively the whole Profits are reserved) of eventually receiving very considerable additions.

Thus, a Policy for £1200 or £1250 can at most ages be had, from the first, for the premium charged elsewhere for £1000 only. Policies for £1000 which have shared at three Septennial Investigations have already been increased to £1400, £1600, and even to £1800.

EXAMPLES OF ANNUAL PREMIUM TO SECURE £100 AT DEATH (WITH PROFITS):

| Age | 25 | 30 | 35 | 40 | 45 | 50 |
|---------------------|---------|---------|---------|---------|---------|---------|
| Payable during Life | £1 18 0 | £2 1 6 | £2 6 10 | £2 14 9 | £3 5 9 | £4 1 7 |
| Limited to 21 Years | £2 12 6 | £2 15 4 | £3 0 2 | £3 7 5 | £3 17 6 | £4 12 1 |

Thus a person of 30 may secure £1000 at death, with Profits, for a yearly premium of £20 15s., which in the other Scottish Mutual Offices would assure £800 only.

Or, if unwilling to burden himself with payments during the whole of his life, he may secure a policy for £1000, with prospect of additions from the profits, for a Premium of £27 13s 4d, limited to twenty-one payments, being nearly the same as most Offices require during the whole of life.

Tables of Premiums, to cease after 7, 14, or any other number of years, may be had on application.

The New Assurances of last year were £621,574. The subsisting Assurances are now upwards of Six Millions. The Annual Income of 1867 was £234,000. The Accumulated Fund, arising entirely from Premiums, was £1,365,365—all invested in undoubted securities.

REPORTS, and every information, may be obtained at the Head Office, 6 St. Andrew Square, Edinburgh, or from any of the Agents.

THE Publishers of the POST OFFICE KILMARNOCK DIRECTORY beg to apologise to their Subscribers, and the public generally, for the considerable delay which has taken place in its publication. Regretting this delay, they beg to indulge the hope that the result of their labours will meet the want so long felt in Kilmarnock for a work of the kind, and may thus obtain the approval of their Subscribers and the commercial community of the town and neighbourhood.

The Publishers have to express their thanks to all who have kindly furnished them with information. They are under special obligations to Mr. JAMES ROSE, Teacher, for his Historical Sketch of the Town; and to Mr. CHARLES REID, Surveyor, for his valuable assistance in producing the Map.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF KILMARNOCK.

A SHORT sketch of the town, considered in the past and present, is necessary, to some extent, as an introduction to a Directory. This we intend to give. Besides, the Directory is intended to serve as a guide to strangers visiting the locality: hence the need of something beyond a few bare introductory words.

The early history of Kilmarnock, like that of many other large towns, is largely hidden in the mists of time. Not having had anything of special moment in connection with itself, there are no authentic public documents on which to fall back for information, nor were the local and special matters connected or associated with the town of more prominent interest. Consequently, the accounts we have of the early position and condition of Kilmarnock are meagre. Even tradition furnishes us with scant materials.

The origin of the town is by all writers traced to the presence in the locality of a holy man named Mernock or Marnock. To such, or to the presence of a strong feudal residence in the vicinity, is to be traced the beginning of the majority of our large inland places. In the days when might, more than now, made right, the shelter of the monastery, the abbey, or the castle, was the first nucleus of the hamlet, village, town, or city. The priest was often found a better landlord and a better safeguard than the nobleman, and so, people were naturally drawn to where the priests had fixed their residence. Hence we may suppose, that the origin of Kilmarnock was the cell or chapel of the priest or missionary Mernock. By and bye, there would be added the dwellings of the vassals attached to the baronial residence of the Lockharts, or the Boyds. The latter, however, would have far less influence than the former, and accordingly the major part of the writers on this subject attribute the origin of the town exclusively to the cell, or burial place of St. Marnock.

It is difficult to fix the date of the life, death, or burial of this saint. He is affirmed to have been a bishop, priest, or minister in the early part of the fourth century. Originally the parish included Fenwick district, the which was disjoined and converted into a separate parish in 1641. Previous to this date, the patronage was transferred from Archbishop Spottiswood to Robert Boyd, the ancestor of the Kilmarnock family. It passed from that family to the Glencairns, and ultimately was bought by Miss Scott, who became Duchess of Portland, and in whose descendants it presently remains. The parish, of which the town is the centre, is about 9 miles long and from 4 to 5 in breadth; its superficial area is reckoned at 8340 acres. It is drained principally by the Kilmarnock river; is generally flat, with a gentle slope to the south. The land is, by good authorities, reckoned strong and fertile. The greater part is arable, and in few places in Scotland has greater progress been made in agricultural pursuits than in this district. The principal land owners are the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Bute, Craufurd of Craufurdland, White of Grougar, and Dunlop of Annanhill.

But to return to the town. Assuming that the chapel of St. Marnock was the nucleus, we might naturally expect to find the older parts of the town to radiate from it or cluster near it. Of the ancient church or chapel, only the steeple remains. The date on this is 1410, inscribed from a supposed old date over one of the doors. That the original edifice and churchyard could not be far from this, may be inferred from the fact that lately, while some excavations were being made in Bank Street, a pretty large collection of human bones was found, a presumptive evidence of an ancient place of interment. Near the church we find the College Wynd, a name given, it is supposed, from the existence of an ecclesiastical place of tuition, and which other traditions or faint recollections seem to verify. Any one who has examined the interior of the houses in Strand, must have noticed the remains of former greatness and elegance. This, from its proximity to the College Wynd, would be a very early part of the town. Again, on the other side of the church we have Nelson Street, either as associated with the chapel, or as a pendicle to Kilmarnock House. That this part of the town is of old date, is almost proved by the discovery, a few years ago, of a carved image or angel, in one of the houses in Nelson Street, and which is now in the possession of our worthy registrar, Mr. J. S. Gregory. But, probably, Cheapside was older than Nelson Street, as in it was the old Town House and Tolbooth. It is known too that the old corn mill of the town was near the centre of our present Cross, and there would be some houses near it or connected with it. The description of the town by Pont, in 1609, is—"A large village, and of grate repaire. . . . It hath a purty church, from vich ye village, castell, and lordschipe takes its name." Then there was a strip of houses across the Cross at the head of King Street; another of nearly equal size at the foot of Portland Street, and which is supposed to have formed part of Croft Street. The long line of passage known as Fore Street, Soulis Street, and High Street, is of very old date, and at the end of last century and beginning of this, formed the principal thoroughfare of the town, and the residences of our local aristocracy. There are evidences that this was intended to be the leading road to the Dean, the residence of the Lord of the Manor. But from various circumstances, most likely the misfortunes which overtook the family immediately before the revolution of 1745, this and other improvements in the upper part of the town were departed from and never executed. Boyd Street and Back Street are also very old parts of the town. One most noticeable feature about Kilmarnock in these early times was its enormous length compared with its breadth. And this remains visible at the present day, notwithstanding all the additions and improvements made on it both eastward and westward.

As few, if any of the younger portion of the community have any conception of what "Auld Killie" was like, we shall give a rough pen and ink sketch of it during the last century, and even as late as the beginning of the present one. Possibly a more irregular, zigzag, and unprepossessing assemblage of houses could hardly be conceived of as forming a town. There was not only irregularity, but there were encumbrances. The houses were low, ill-built, and thatched. Coming from Glasgow, the road would like the letter S, almost from above Beansburn to the head of Dean Lane. It skirted the east side of Dean Street on the brow of the hill overlooking the Townholm. The old toll house is still standing at the top of the lane. Passing down this steep declivity, the road reached the head of High Street. Thence the way was open till where Fore Street debouches on the Cross. Here it abruptly turned in the direction of Cheapside, thence across the Old Bridge, and along Sandbed, where on certain days you might see the country farmers in the kitchen or spence of the houses disposing of their wool. From Sandbed to Nethertonholm the road was neither good nor straight. Taking the other course from the Cross, the way was by Waterloo Street, across the Flesh Market Bridge, and up the nearly precipitous ascent of Tankardha' Brae. The parish school was in Green Street, where our worthy superintendent of police, Mr Galt, now resides.

Passing from the town to the people and their occupations, we find some curious remains of these by gone days. About three hundred years since the population did not, in all probability, amount to more than one thousand. The leading surnames then were much the same as now. The records show that Brown, Smith, Boyd, Paton, Adam, Wylie, Crooks, Wallace, and Tannahill, were leading names. About a couple of centuries ago the population would be fully two thousand; and a hundred years since it was barely five thousand. The occupations of the ancient Kilmarnock folk were considerably akin to those of the present day. Woollen manufactures of various kinds, bonnet making, and iron working, glove making, tanning, and shoemaking, were the principal arts practised by our forefathers. Cutlery is spoken of, probably obtained from Kilmaurs, and this, though extinct, has been supplanted by its kindred occupation of engineering. Kilmarnock bonnets and night caps were long proverbial, and are not yet supplanted. About thirty or forty years ago glove making ceased to be carried on here, but the skin trade is still pretty vigorously prosecuted. The progress in population within the last hundred years is somewhat extraordinary. In 1763, it was nearly 5000; in 1792, 6776; in 1801, 8079; in 1811, 10,148; in 1821, 12,769; in 1831, 18,093; in 1841, 19,956; in 1851, 21,283; in 1861, 23,551; and at present it is estimated at 25,000. Thus Kilmarnock has quintupled itself in the last century.

The town is singularly barren in antiquarian remains. Recent improvements have taken away some of the older portions of the town or changed them so much that they are now barely recognisable. Aged inhabitants speak of the old tolbooth and the jugs as antique in style, though far from imposing in appearance. The oldest structure in the town, so far as we know, is the Low Church Steeple. Its date, as we have already remarked, is 1410. There can be little doubt of its antiquity; some years ago it was outwardly amended and otherwise improved. A few vandals, for we can hardly call them anything else, proposed its removal. It is true there is little architectural beauty about the steeple, but its very antiquity ought to speak in behalf of its preservation. Another memento of olden time is Soulis Cross at the head of Soulis Street. Age and exposure had so disfigured the original that it was removed, and the present erected in a niche in the wall. The inscription is, "To the memory of Lord Soulis, A.D. 1444. Erected by subscription in 1825. 'The days of old to mind I call.'" Tradition has it that the monument was erected to mark the place where one of the Soulis family fell, shot by an arrow from the bow of Boyd, Lord of Kilmarnock. The Meal Market, a few yards further on in the same line of street, is an old building. The only other place of note is Kilmarnock House, the town residence of the superior. Before St. Marnock Street was formed the situation of the house was pleasant and beautiful. It was unfinished at the death of the last Earl, and has passed through various changes. Presently it is occupied by the Kilmarnock Industrial School, and the offices of the Inspector of the Poor.

Like all dependencies of feudal lords, Kilmarnock was governed solely by the will of the manor lord. In 1591 it was erected a burgh of barony. Another charter was granted at the close of the 17th century, and by it the town was ruled till the passing of the Reform Bill. It was then made a Parliamentary burgh, a portion of the parish of Riccarton being included in it. In conjunction with Renfrew, Port-Glasgow, Dumbarton, and Rutherglen, it returns a member to Parliament, Kilmarnock being the returning burgh. At the present time an effort is being made to get a member for the town apart from the other burghs. The first member was Captain John Dunlop of Dunlop. The present member is the Hon. E. P. Bouverie, who has sat for the district upwards of twenty years. The present constituency numbers 730, which will be increased to 4000 on the passing of the new Reform Act. Information regarding the civil government of the town will be found in the appendix.

We have already referred to the rapid increase of the population during the last century. This has arisen from the increase of business and extension of manufactures. Doubtless not a little of the increase is due to the rich mineral wealth of the locality. The development of the coal traffic, during the memory of even a moderately young person, has been enormous. Coal has long been worked in the neighbourhood, but chiefly within the last forty or fifty years. The making of the old Tram Road gave an impetus to the trade by increasing the facilities for shipment at Troon. This was among the oldest, if not the oldest railway in Scotland. The Duke of Portland, the old Duke, as he was familiarly called, fostered the extension of the coal trade. Presently, Messrs Finnie, Galloway, Gilmour & Co., Sturrock, Yates, Craig, and others, are the principal coal-masters. Brick and tile making have long been carried on at Moorfield, by Mr Taylor's family, while of late, the manufacture of fire-clay bricks, tiles, pipes, and other things of that nature, has been extensively entered into at the Dean, Perceton, and Hillhead, by the Messrs Craig. The enlargement of the coal trade has caused numerous groups of houses to be erected in the vicinity: this, coupled with the Portland Iron Works, at Hurlford, has materially aided the wealth of the town and district. The trade of the town has, though changeable, been steadily on the increase. As one branch decayed another sprang up or increased. Carpets are extensively manufactured in the town. The inventions of the late Thomas Morton, Esq., largely benefitted this branch of manufacture. Messrs Gregory, Thomson & Co., Wilson & Son, Cuthbertson & Taylor, Brown & M'Laren, and Blackwood Brothers, are the leading business men in this trade. Tanning and skinning were formerly more extensive than now. We remember four tan works, and five or six skin works. Presently there is only one large tan work, that of Crooks Brothers. Curriers have also decreased, but the trade is still fairly represented by the Messrs Crooks and Armour. Calico printing was, not many years ago, a staple trade of the town, but it has nearly died away. At Irvine Bank, and Low Glencairn Street, it is still carried on, but only to a very limited extent. Shoemaking, wholesale and for exportation, is prosecuted by the firm of Messrs A. L. Clark & Co., besides many smaller manufacturers. Light weaving has nearly disappeared, while Venetian and Zebra work has to some extent taken its place. In so far as we know, harness weaving has also left the town. We must not forget the manufacture of Kilmarnock caps, for which our forbears were so famous. The trade affords work to hundreds of females, though the ease with which the knitting is learned has told sadly against the educational progress of girls employed thereat. Messrs Ritchie & Co., Laughland, Douglas, Reyburn & Co., Creelman, Sulter, and others, are the principal makers of this portion of male attire. At the present moment the iron trade is the leading trade of the town. The principal places where this labour is carried on are the Railway Works, at Bonnieton Square; Messrs A. Barclay, Caledonian Foundry; T. M'Culloch, Vulcan Foundry; and A. Finnie & Son, Kilmarnock Foundry. These works alone give employment to upwards of one thousand adults. Besides these, there are Messrs Robertson's, and Caldwell's, Townholm, and two works in the lower part of the town. A water meter work has been lately added to our mechanical branches of labour; while the extensive power-loom factory of Messrs T. & J. Ferguson, West Netherton, helps to swallow a large section of female labour. So great has been the change brought about by these trades that the value of property has been nearly doubled within the last eight years. It now amounts to £48,400.

The change on the external appearance of Kilmarnock since this century commenced has been marvellous. The past thirty years, or fully that, have so altered the topographical look of it as to make it a new town. The beginning of these great changes in external appearances was in 1804, when King Street was opened up and the new bridge built. About the same time Portland Street and Wellington Street were formed, and thus a new back bone was given to the town. About thirty years thereafter Robertson Place and St. Marnock Street were formed. The latter, with Portland Terrace, was a great improvement. The culminating points of alteration were the formation of Duke Street, in 1859, and John Finnie Street, in 1865. Between these was the opening of Union Street, connecting High Street and Portland Street. Other great improvements are in contemplation.

There are several very handsome public buildings in Kilmarnock. Among them we may mention the Town Buildings, erected on the new bridge in 1805; the Tontine, in 1815; the Court-House, in 1852; and the Corn Exchange, in 1862. The last named is not exceeded by any building in the shire. It was built by a company at the cost of £6000. The Albert Tower, a monument to the late Prince Consort, is a very beautiful portion of the building, and was erected by subscription. The new Fever Hospital, in Wellington Street, will soon be finished, and add to the beauty of the town. The greater part of the churches and banks in the town are handsome and elegant in structure. Many fine villas have lately been erected in London Road, Portland Road, Grange Terrace, and Dundonald Road. The principal streets are spacious, with handsome shops, and in excellent repair.

The town is well supplied with churches and schools. Information regarding these will be found in the appendix. There are in all 21 schools in Kilmarnock, taught by 31 principal teachers, 22 assistants, and 14 pupil teachers. The number of children on the roll of these schools was very lately estimated at 3185, the average attendance at 2742, and accommodation for 3717. Six of the schools are under Government inspection.

Kilmarnock has been famed for its literary character. A long list of respectable names in the world of letters could easily be made out. It has attained pre-eminence from one occurrence, to wit, the publication, by John Wilson, of the first edition of the immortal poems of Robert Burns, in July, 1786. Were there nothing else than this to mention, it would suffice to keep the name and fame of "Killie" ever green. Burns had not a few friends in this town, and the first edition was well patronised here. Eighty years afterwards, a beautiful fac-simile of the edition was brought out by Mr James M'Kie, King Street. This has elicited the warmest encomiums from all who have seen it. At present there are of literary institutions, the Kilmarnock Library, the Philosophical Institution, the Athenæum, and the Reading Room. The first three of these are now amalgamated. The fine large room where the united library is kept, is the most elegant in town. The Kilmarnock Library will, in time, come to vie in extent and worth with any in the kingdom; a legacy of upwards of £100 annually having fallen in to it from the estate of the late Robert Crawford, Esq., Bookseller, for the purchase of new books. The town can only boast of one statue, that of Sir James Shaw, Bart., executed by the late James Fillans, Esq. It is of marble, about 16 feet in total height, and is placed in the centre of the Cross. It was inaugurated in 1848 with masonic honours, and represents the Baronet in his robes as Lord Mayor of London. The intimate connection of Sir James with this locality, his numerous acts of kindness and charity, and the interest he took in the general welfare of the town and its inhabitants were the causes why his statue occupies so prominent a position in Kilmarnock.

A few events of more than ordinary importance have occurred in Kilmarnock since the beginning of this century. These we will now shortly sketch. Early in the year 1800 a serious fire broke out in the lower part of the town, now known as Low Glencairn Street. It spread with great rapidity, and raged with such fury that few persons had the courage to pass down the street. The weather had been dry for some weeks, the thatch was as tinder, a strong wind blew, and both sides of the Holm were in flames. Fortunately it happened during the day, otherwise the loss of life might have been great. The progress of the fire was ultimately stopped by cutting away the roofs of some houses beyond the reach of the flames. As it was, above thirty houses were consumed, among which was the Holm School, then lately erected. Little was saved from the fire, as it spread quickly, and the energies of the inhabitants were almost paralysed. A subscription was immediately set afoot, and a considerable sum raised for the benefit of the sufferers.

In the year following a more remarkable and calamitous event occurred in connection with the Low Church. The late Dr. M'Kinlay was then in the flower of his popularity, and the church was always crowded on the day he preached. On the afternoon of Sabbath, October 18th, 1801, a cry was raised, as the Dr. was about to enter the church, that the building was falling. A sudden panic seized the people, and a rush was made for the doors. Those in the lower part had a better opportunity than the others, but this was hindered by the fall of the railing of the stairs leading from the galleries. The scene that followed is described as being terrible. The strong trampled down the weak, the powerful ruthlessly thrust aside the feeble, a huge mass of living and dying beings was soon gathered in inextricable confusion, and there seemed no limit to the terror that enwrapped all. When something like calmness had been restored, and the coagulated heap of beings loosened, it was found that 29 had died; 1 died shortly after, and about 80 were injured to a greater or less extent. No real cause for the panic was ever discovered; a piece of plaster falling from the roof being the only feasible explanation. The church was replaced by the present erection.

In 1825 another serious fire broke out in the Back Causeway, and which was long remembered. It began in the stables belonging to the Angel Inn, and was first discovered by James Gilmour, a well-known character of the present day. It caused the death of three individuals, whose calcined remains were found after the conflagration was over.

The latest and most notable of these calamitous events was the flood in 1852. The recollection of this terrible outburst of water must still be fresh in the memory of very many. It was in July, and the weather had been sultry and fiery. The evening of the preceding day was remarkable for the phenomena seen at sunset. A storm was portended. It broke out about midnight, and increased in intensity till between two and three o'clock, morning. The lightning was most vivid. The peals of thunder were like the firing of parks of artillery. The rain fell in torrents. The river began to rise. Onwards and upwards it swelled, till it became a very flood indeed. The full details of its extent and magnificence of the mighty river, and damage done, would take much more space than can be spared in this sketch, suffice it that it swept along King Street, Sandbed Street, and the Holm, with the strength and rapidity of a torrent, doing great injury to all the houses and shops in the route. To add to the general terror, a huge boiler from Mr. Donald's work, Townholm, was carried down the torrent, swimming like a cork. A most melancholy portion of the affair was the drowning of a carter named Bruce, at Mr. Cuthbertson's property, Townhead. In attempting to save one of the horses in the stable he was carried down the stream. For about two hours, from four to six, the waters were at their height. Afterwards they gradually fell, and then people began to reckon the loss they had sustained. It was estimated that the total value of the property destroyed within the town was at least £15,000.

Kilmarnock has near it, or not far from it, a few remains of ancient seats. Foremost among these is The Dean, the seat of the Boyds. This ruin is finely situated close to the junction of the Borland and Kilmarnock streams, and when complete must have formed a striking feature in the landscape. It is composed of two parts, an ancient and a modern. The former consists of a rather lofty tower, of considerable strength, with loopholes, battlements, and turrets, for "watch and ward." In far back times it must have been the "keep" of the family, and with a moat, would be found all but impregnable. The latter is chiefly composed of a noble hall, on the second story, with other rooms, and is possessed of no small beauty of form. The castle had, originally, large gardens attached to it, but these, like its owners, have passed away. The building was destroyed by fire about a hundred and fifty years ago, and has since gradually gone to decay. As it is, it is a venerable ruin, and commands the attention and respect of every one who sees it. A few years ago, the Duke of Portland very wisely put some repairs on it, to preserve it from utterly crumbling away. At the village of Knockintiber is Busby Castle, a ruin not unlike the more ancient part of the Dean. Little is known of this place, but it must have been a building of considerable strength. Fully two miles from the town, and most romantically situated on the Carmel, is Rowallan Castle. This consists of an older and more recent portion. The former is a strong, thickly built tower, nearly gone. The latter is a fine specimen of a baronial residence, and has still some portions of it in good repair. The tower is evidently of great age, and would have been capable of stout resistance to a beleaguering force. This place is chiefly famous as being the birth place of Elizabeth Mure, first wife of the second Robert of Scotland. It merged, by marriage, into the Hastings' family. Another ancient seat is that of Craufurdland Castle, about three miles from Kilmarnock, on Craufurdland water. One portion of this is stated to be of great antiquity. This family is descended from the Howiesons, famous in the story of the "Gudeman of Ballangeich." Five miles from Kilmarnock is Dundonald Castle, finely situated on a rocky eminence, at the village of that name. It is a large, squarely built, massive ruin, commanding a beautiful view of the country, and the Frith of Clyde. In days of yore, when the bow and arrow were the principal weapons of attack, this castle must have been one of great strength. Whether its security or its beautiful site were the enticements is not known, but it seems to have been a favourite residence of Robert second, as Lord of Kyle. He is said to have died there. Few objects are more conspicuous in the district than this ruin. A list of the more modern residences of country gentlemen will be found in the appendix. Many of them are well worth a short pilgrimage to visit. The families who reside in them are all more or less connected with the town, and take a greater or less degree of interest in its prosperity.

RATES OF POSTAGE.

1.—Inland Letters.

The rate of postage to be prepaid is one penny for every half ounce or fraction of half an ounce. As a general rule, the postage, if not paid in advance, is double the foregoing; and if the payment in advance be insufficient, double the deficiency is charged. An inland letter, for example, weighing more than half an ounce and not exceeding one ounce, if bearing a penny stamp only, is, on delivery, charged twopence. On re-directed letters, however, the charge for re-direction is the same whether prepaid or collected on delivery.

2.—Newspapers and other Periodicals bearing the Newspaper Stamp.

Inland.—Made up in covers open at the sides, with the stamp exposed to view, and posted within fifteen days of publication, with no marks or writing in any part except the address (or they will be charged twopence extra on each paper), are forwarded from one part of the kingdom to another free (except those delivered within the free delivery of the place where posted, which are charged one penny).

Foreign.—Newspapers or periodicals registered at the General Post-Office for transmission abroad, are sent at reduced rates; but the rates must be wholly paid in postage stamps, as the impressed newspaper stamp counts for nothing. Newspapers not registered are treated as books.

3.—Book Post, including, when the foregoing special privileges are not claimed, Newspapers (with other periodicals) and Parliamentary Proceedings.

The postage is one penny for every quarter of a pound or fraction of a quarter of a pound.

Colonial and Foreign Book Post.—Except that the rates of postage are higher, books can be sent to all British Colonies, and to many foreign countries, on the same conditions as those of the Inland Book Post.

4.—Inland Pattern and Sample Post.

The postage is twopence for every quarter of a pound or fraction of a quarter of a pound. No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 ounces in weight.

REGISTRATION.

By the prepayment of a fee of fourpence any letter, newspaper, book, or other packet, may be registered to any place in the United Kingdom or the British Colonies.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The Rates of Assurance of fixed sums are very moderate.

Extra Premiums for Foreign Residence have been dispensed with to a great extent, and a very important rule has been adopted to protect the interests of parties holding Policies on the Lives of others, who may incur extra risks without the knowledge of the holders.

For surrender of Policies of the ordinary class, after three years' endurance, a liberal return of Premiums according to a fixed rule is guaranteed, besides the value of vested Bonuses where such have been declared.

According to the constitution of the Company, Investigations must be made at intervals not exceeding five years. The last Investigation took place at 31st January, 1867, when Bonuses were added to all Assurances of the Participation Class; and the following results of this and previous declarations may be stated.

1. A Policy for £1000 on which 12 years' premiums had been paid was increased in 1867, to £1166 17 10
2. A Policy for £1000 on which 17 years' premiums had been paid was increased to £1239 10 7
3. A Policy for £1000 on which 22 years' premiums had been paid was increased to £1312 14 1
4. A Policy for £1000 on which 27 years' premiums had been paid was increased to £1388 11 2

A further Bonus is also payable on Policies, to which vested additions have been made, becoming Claims before next Investigation—an arrangement which secures for such cases advantages similar to those of Annual Investigations.

FIRE INSURANCES

NICHOLL'S FLUID EXTRACT OF ANNATTO,

W. NICHOLLS, the Manufacturer of the above Preparation, begs to announce that, from the increased demand for his Preparation of FLUID EXTRACT OF ANNATTO, he has, this season, been obliged to enlarge his Factory, which accounts for orders not having been so readily supplied as heretofore. He can now manufacture 5,000 gallons at a making, which enables him to supply the Article perfectly pure, and at all times can assure it at one strength; which is of consequence to the maker of both Cheese and Butter.

W. N. solicits a trial from those who never used it, knowing that they will find it profitable, as well as being so convenient to use. A measure for colouring 28 to 30 lbs. of Cheese can always be obtained of the Agent, which gives the Cheese Maker a certain and easy mode of making the Cheese of one uniform colour, which is very important to the purchaser.

The Cheese Factors of England unhesitatingly declare, that if the Cheese is properly made, they have no difficulty in distinguishing the Cheese coloured with NICHOLL'S FLUID EXTRACT OF ANNATTO, as the shade of colour is unmistakable in both Cheese and Butter, and also most desirable in the London Market. One quart of Annatto will colour one Ton of Cheese.

JAMES M'KIE,

PRINTER, BOOKBINDER, BOOKSELLER,

Wholesale and Retail Stationer and News-Agent.

It is seldom that I trouble the public with any public announcement, but having this opportunity—which does not present itself every day—of getting not an ephemeral but a permanent Advertisement, in a work like the Kilmarnock Directory, which will be a book of reference for some time to come, I take the chance thereof to thank my Customers for their patronage during the twenty-nine years I have now been in business, and will be happy still to add new ones to their number.

The Printing Department I cannot pretend to manage better than I have done, as I have always executed Jobs in the style wished, at the time wanted, and at a price to please my Customers—rarely, if ever, have I disappointed any one.

The nature of Job Binding is such that it cannot be so quickly done off as Job Printing, but even in this department—both as to style, price, and time of finishing the work—I have managed to please my employers. Samples of Binding, from the plainest to the most substantial and elegant, may be seen on the premises. Books Bound to any pattern.

Stationery of all descriptions; Books of all ordinary Rulings; Account Books, ruled to any pattern, with printed headings, &c., manufactured in the best style; Books in general literature; with the too numerous varieties of School Books in use, sold at as cheap a rate as they can be had anywhere.

The News Agency part of the trade—wholesale and retail—is possibly the most difficult to do with perfect accuracy and promptitude, but those who have the least idea of the inconveniences to be encountered in connection with this branch—particularly during the winter months—will “Be to our faults a little blind,

And to our failings very kind.”

DISTRIBUTION OF PROFITS.

Nine-tenths or ninety per cent. of the Profits are divided every seven years among the Participating Policy-holders. Policies of five years' duration becoming claims between one division of Profits, and another are entitled to an Intermediate Bonus.

The Company's system of Division of Profits, while it does not exclude younger Policy-holders from their fair share in the allocation of Bonus, reserves a much larger proportion for those whose Policies have existed for a long period, and who have themselves attained an advanced age.

Five Periodical Investigations have already been made, and the results of the Equitable Principle of Distribution are brought out in the very large Bonuses which attach to cases fulfilling these conditions, and are fully illustrated by the undernoted examples.
